Industrial Revolution in Britain

Name: _____

Overpopulation

Look at each of these photographs and write your reactions. What do you see? How do the photographs make you feel? Do you think these problems are solved in today's society?

Because so many people were moving to cities so quickly, there weren't enough homes for everybody. Many people lived in apartments that were very crowded, and many others were homeless. Jacob Riis was a photographer and journalist who lived after the industrial revolution, but the overpopulation he captured was a result of the industrial Revolution. Riis's photography is powerful.
