

What can you learn about a chimpanzee by watching it?

Learn by Watching

What is one way to learn about a mammal? By watching it in its home! That is what Jane Goodall did. She went to Africa to study chimpanzees. At first, the chimps were scared of Jane. They did not want her to get close. After a long time, the chimps began to trust her.

Jane learned a lot about the chimps by observing them. Jane found out something that surprised many people. She found out that chimps are a lot like people. Jane saw chimps do many things that people do. She saw them hunt for meat. She saw them use sticks for tools. She saw them solve problems. She found out that chimps even have feelings!

1. Look back in the passage. Circle the word that means "watching."

2. Think about the passage. List three ways that chimps are like people.

3. Why do you think the chimps began to trust Jane?

4. Read the words below. Circle the three words that best tell about Jane Goodall.

watchful rushed brave scientist

Think about the passage. On the back of this sheet, tell about Jane Goodall in your own words.

