

Name _____

All About Satellites

In the diagram below, write the characteristics that artificial and natural satellites have in common, and those that they have different.

Satellites: What are they?

Technically, a satellite is an object, which orbits around another object. The Moon is Earth's natural satellite and the Earth and other planets are satellites of the Sun. But not all satellites are natural, there are also satellites, which were built by men, these are called artificial satellites.